From being blacklisted by powerful monopolies for being rightfully critical of them to being their stenographer. Every time I see MJF post Microsoft fodder I honestly wonder how much being blacklisted by Microsoft cost her/how much she stood to gain by falling back in line. RWM: Least favorite?

MJF: I'd have to say being blacklisted by Microsoft for writing a story based on an internal memo penned by Mark Lucovsky (now with Google, ironically) that acknowledged 63,000 bugs were still left in Windows 2000 when the product shipped. I was barred from executive interviews at the Windows 2000 launch as a result of my story. My "punishment" lasted for a few years. Certain Windows execs refused to speak to me or meet with me for ages because of that story. I believed, and still believe, that I was just doing my job as a reporter.
